“ RIP Charlie Wise 🥺

Charlie was a true cornerstone of Audubon, following in his father's footsteps and embodying everything we love about our hometown. What I tried to capture in the picture below. Our bond began during our days in Audubon soccer as kids, and we also served as altar boys together at Holy Maternity. Charlie always carried his faith and values with him, staying true to his Christian roots.

He was a family man who loved deeply, a loyal friend, and someone who respected veterans and all the traditions that made our Audubon community special. Charlie was immensely proud of Audubon, where he grew up, went to Audubon High School, and graduated. He loved reminiscing about the town and its people, and we often talked or texted to keep each other updated on what was happening back home.

After high school, he attended Camden County College & worked at Dels, and during that time, Charlie became more like a brother to me. He lived with me in my house in Audubon for a while. Charlie also loved spending time out with friends, socializing at local bars and enjoying good company. Then he got his own place while working at US Foods before moving to California to be with the love of his life, Tina Evans. There, he secured a job with Allied Universal and spent the last 20 years building a life with Tina & her family.

Charlie recently celebrated his 53rd birthday on December 24th, Christmas Eve. Despite the miles between us, he remained one of my biggest supporters and best friend. He often asked me to visit him, and I regret thinking we had more time for that.

He never lost his love for Philadelphia sports-the Phillies, Flyers, 76ers, and, of course, the Eagles.

For those lucky enough to know Charlie, you know what a truly special person he was. His kindness, pride, and love for those around him will be deeply missed. Rest in peace, my dear friend.
